Ladies' Beauty Parlor

This is another of the short talks we are giving on the subject of Hair and Scalp. Talks about things that will add to the health and beauty of the hair without injury in any way. We are asked every day if Bleaching or Dyeing the hair is injurious. The treatment for bleaching or dyeing, if properly applied, will not injure the most delicate scalp or hair.

Bleaching does not necessarily mean that the resulting effort is an extreme blond type. Instead it is used to produce a toning quality and bring out the desired color that is the most effective for the complexion. Sometimes the hair has grown a shade or two darker or become spotted in a short period of time, for some unknown reason and leaves a contrast between face and hair, then a slight bleach will aid wonderfully. Let us say here that Bleaching is permanent if properly applied.

Dyeing should be used in the same way as bleaching, that is, for the purpose of making the hair darker, using discretion, as many beautiful effects may be obtained by slightly changing the shade. The Henna Wreath and the Henna Pack also have their purpose and the results of the application of either bring out that delicate sheen so much admired by all. If you are not sure as to just the right thing to do consult Mrs. Allen free of charge—her advice is yours for the asking.

and a few choice readings also served to make the evening a very enjoyable one to those who attended the function.

DEFEATED ITHACA

The Alma high school basket ball five defeated Ithaca high at Ithaca last night by a score of 23 to 19, and put the clinchers on the county honors. The game was rough during the entire bout, and throughout the entire contest the score was close, the opportunity to grab the long end of the score being held out as a bait for each five until the final whistle.
Creesh and Elias featured the game for the Alma quintet.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

That morning of starting in the new semester! What a full "high speed" day it was. Halls were thronged, coat rooms screamed in protest, and class rooms were filled to suffocation with eager expectant high school people, awaiting their sentence to the intellectual scaffold, of a new semester in their high school career. It would have been interesting to an unsympathetic onlooker to watch different people adjust themselves to the new routine. Some of the more tranquil ones came sauntering in at a quarter of eight, with an air of peaceful acceptance to conditions. A few others came puffing in at the crucial moment, as nervous and exhausted, as they could possibly be. Then came the mighty struggle of clashing schedules, much changing of the mind and a monstrous lot of reconstruction on the part of the student, and inexhaustible work on the part of the principal.

But it is ever thus at the beginning of things, and although we profess to dread and despise it above anything on earth, it might be worse, at that.

The House of Representatives was called to order by Elliott Crooks, speaker, at seven o'clock p. m. in the assembly room. Three new members were sworn in. It was moved by Percy Wilson that the books of Secretary Neal, be examined by a committee of six, three from each party.
After much debating the motion was carried as the Republican party was the predominating faction. The election of officers was held. Orville Ingersol was elected speaker, Velmar Lyons, sergeant-of-arms, and Percy Wilson, secretary. Speaker Ingersol then, took charge of the house. Mr.
John Holmes, Democrat, brought up the bill to be discussed at the following meeting, that the United States go into the affairs of Mexico so far as to establish a firm government.
There arose some difficulty over whether the clerk should have a right to vote. The meeting grew very stormy and the sergeant-of-arms was asked to take his position and refusing to act Frank Neal was appointed ex-tempore sergeant-of-arms. Most of the Democrats being discouraged at things in general made a grand rush for the door and succeeded in getting out. The Republicans then adjourned as they had no further business.

The class of '22 is said to be one of the most lively classes the Alma high school has ever known. This class, has not only put the question of "Inter class debates" before the faculty, but has tried to make it a success as far as possible.

In foot ball and basketball this class has shown its superiority over the classes of '21 and '23. Having been overwhelmed by the class of '20 with a difference in score of two points, the '22's intend to challenge the '20's for another game.

Also the class of '22, in order to set a good example to the classes following her, intend to stage a play just before spring vacation.
The sophomore class has started this interclass debating contest and it is expected that some pep will be shown and will make things more lively in the school. The plan is that each class will have a debating team.
The athletic contest is practically closed as the Seniors won the game last Friday from the Sophomores and are thus, champions of the school.
Nevertheless, the Sophomores have immediately started something else.

The sophomores started the interclass debating team. It is hoped that as much enthusiasm and interest will be shown as in the athletics.
The date of the senior play has been set for February 27. Miss Phelps will take charge of the coaching of the play because of Miss Carroll's illness.

The sophomores are busy trying out for a play to be given by their class before spring vacation. "A Scrap of Paper" has been chosen as the play. And we expect the sophomores to live up to their reputation of doing things well.

The Lambda Sigma girls plan to entertain their mother's at a tea to be given in the high school gymnasium Saturday afternoon.

Stringent library rules are making the library a fit place to study.
